UMS Board of Regents holds meeting at SSU

by Lauren Weis, staff writer

Last Friday the University of Maryland System Board of Regents held a meeting in Holloway Hall. It was one of the eight yearly meetings held by the Board at various schools within the UMS.

The Board of Regents is a group consisting of 17 members, one of whom is a full-time college student from a system school, one member is the State Secretary of Agriculture ex officio and the remaining 15 are appointed from the general public by the Governor.

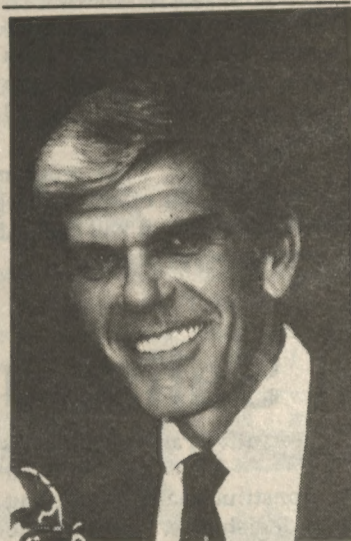

Regents are usually selected from prominent citizens within the state, business leaders, judges and others who are often friends or political allies of the Governor.

The Board oversees 13 institutions of higher learning from within the state, enrolls over 130 million students and has an annual budget in excess of $1.5 billion.

This Board is extremely powerful, having direct authority over the presidents of each member institution. As direct supervisors to the University Presidents, the Board controls policy changes, tuition and fee increases and public statements made by these university leaders.

The Regents run the system

The Board of Regents has direct authority over university presidents, such as Thomas Bellavance.

with a great deal of economic efficiency, much as they do their own businesses. This quest for high productivity is apparent in such decisive actions as eliminating programs deemed ineffective, inefficient or duplicative.

One such measure was taken last year, when in accordance with a proposal made by Donald Langenberg, Board of Regents chancellor, 110 programs were slated to be eliminated from UMS schools.

Six programs were to be eliminated from SSU and the measure was met with a large public outcry. The university appealed the plan to the board and was able to retain these majors through promises of, among other things, program consolidation with nearby University of Maryland, Eastern Shore.

When asked if more program cuts could be expected, Chancellor Langenberg said, "Not in the immediate future." He explained that University programs are constantly being evaluated for inefficiency or ineffectiveness, and are dealt with accordingly.

In response to offering joint programs, UMES and SSU have adopted a common academic calendar. Classes will be offered with the same starting and ending dates and times at both institutions. A shuttle bus service will be run between the two institutions to accommodate student travel.

This service is extremely helpful for students who must commute the 12 miles between schools, but is also quite expensive.

It is estimated by SSU administrators that such a service could cost up to $100,000 in the first year, depending on whether new vehicles must be purchased and new drivers hired.

Langenberg when asked who was to pay for such a service, necessary in response to a Board of Regents mandate for institutional consolidation, replied, "the individual institution," currently SSU.

This could put a strain on our already stretched budget. SSU receives the lowest funding per student in the UMS, $18.4 million less yearly than UMES (See Chart).

Langenberg explained that certain campuses need to be funded higher than others, depending upon the kind of programs offered at each institution. For instance, University of Maryland at College Park, who sponsors a great deal of expensive scientific and medical Center offers suggestions for suicide prevention

by Jennifer Evans, staff writer

Fact: Suicide is the second leading cause of death (following accidents) among young people between the age of 15 and 24.

Fact: One young American kills him/herself every 98 minutes.

Fact: The incidence of suicide among young people nearly tripled during the last three decades.

Fact: Regardless of race or sex, Maryland's youth have been most likely to choose firearms as their primary method of suicide.

Year after year, the statistics on suicide become more frightening as adolescents turn to death as a way of solving their problems. According to the Life Crisis Center here in Salisbury, "For every [reported] attempted suicide there are as many as 50 [actual] attempts." These figures do not even take into account the drug overdoses, homicides, falls and single car crashes which may actually be suicide attempts. These situations are often "misclassified to protect families and friends from the pain and stigma" surrounding suicide, according to the Life Crisis Center.

Although the reasons someone may have for choosing suicide are usually very personal, there are some common feelings that can be found in these situations. The Life Crisis Center said that feelings of inferiority and worthlessness, depression, hopelessness and helplessness are many ways you can help before a tragedy occurs.

The Life Crisis Center stresses the fact that "young people who commit suicide to a close friend or family member, but tend to go unheard, which leads to the desperation of suicide.

To stop this cycle, people must become educated about suicide and its danger signs so they can respond and get the proper help the person needs.

The following items are danger signs to look for if you feel someone may be suicidal.

- verbal suicide threats
- depression
- statements of worthlessness
- preoccupation with ideas of death
- possession of suicide plans
- putting personal affairs in order

Giving program provides for the needy

by Ali Moyer, staff writer

With Christmas right around the corner, many families are out shopping for the perfect gift to give to a loved one.

There are just as many families, however, that cannot afford to buy a gift for anyone.

This year Salisbury State is trying to help out the less fortunate.

A new program called "The Holiday Gift Giving Program" is in the works. This program the whole University, yet each resident assistant is in charge of their own residents' participation.

Susan Abel, Choptank Hall area director, said she feels this program will be quite successful.

Under the program, participants are assigned to a child or family. "Students can then go out themselves and purchase the gifts or someone on the Gift Giving Committee will buy them," said Abel.

Students and R.A.'s alike are Over the last few years there have been similar programs. Unlike the others, however, this program is organized for enthusiastic about the program. Chesapeake R.A. Jim Bennett said, "I'm excited about this program. Because of what we are doing, a lot of people will have it a little easier this Christmas. Hopefully this program will help bring the University back together again."

As the program slowly gets underway, students are quickly rising to the occasion. "My residents seem to be enthused about the Gift Giving Program and think it is a wonderful idea," said Bennett.

Mike Bahr, junior, said, "I think it is great that students are bonding together in order to help the less fortunate."

The program is designed to collect items ranging from food, clothing and toys, to furniture and small appliances.

Bennett said, "The program will make a lot of unfortunate families happy. It will make all involved happy also."

research, would have a higher cost per student than would Salisbury, sponsoring less research and purchasing less equipment.

University of Maryland at Baltimore, highest funded school per student within the system, sponsors mainly graduate professional programs in fields such as medicine, dentistry and law. For this reason, their operating costs per student are quite a bit higher.

When asked if the issue of vast differences in funding would be addressed in the future by the Board of Regents, Langenberg replied, "There's always hope."

Russian expert gives lecture at Salisbury State

by Garrett McGlothlin, staff writer

Professor of political science Charles Ziegler from the University of Louisville spoke on Thursday Oct. 28 about the mood of the Russian people in light of the recent political upheaval in their country.

Addressing a room full of students, Ziegler said that the current situation is best evaluated politically as opposed to historically. "I think if you don't do that, you can't really make sense out of what's going on. It's a confusing situation."

Currently Russia is divided into a dozen political parties and is caught somewhere between Communist reunification and democratic reform. Adding to the ideological debate that has erupted, Russia is in a severe economic crisis.

To make some sense of the current situation, Ziegler began by outlining the events that brought down the Soviet Union. He began with the Soviet approval of a treaty that would have created a federal system in the USSR and granted significant self governing powers.

The failure of a radical coup, he said, accelerated the process of disintegration and sealed the fate of the USSR. The forces of reform grew too strong for the traditional leaders; thus the Soviet Union was pulled apart.

Boris Yeltsin, the current President of Russia, took control over the largest remaining republic to emerge out of the former Soviet Union.

In October of this year, Yeltsin was unable to pass democratic reforms through a conservative Parliament. This led to Yeltsin unconstitutionally dissolving the legislature. Citing the unconstitutionality of Yeltsin's actions, the Parliament called for Yeltsin to step down and for new presidential elections.

Yeltsin, diabolically opposed to the legislature, called for completely new elections. In a referendum, more people said elections. Yeltsin has agreed to new elections for both the president and legislature, including a referendum vote on approval of a new constitution.

Ziegler's question was "Can a viable democracy emerge from this chaos?"

According to Ziegler, Russia has the basis necessary for a democracy. It is a literate state

"It is very much in the U.S. interest to have Democracy develop in Russia. Democratic nations don't make war against each other."

-Charles Ziegler, Political science professor University of Louisville that Boris Yeltsin was justified in stepping outside of constitutional means. This action led to the outbreak of violence when Parliament members refused to step down. Yeltsin used military force to overcome parliamentary opposition and arrested the members.

Because of continuing factionalism among the Russian people, Yeltsin has allowed for the organization of political parties to take place in the scheduled upcoming that has access to media newspaper and television, but it is poor compared to democracies like the United States.

The gap between the rich and the poor is widening in Russia. Ziegler voiced concern over the emerging market economy and its possible effects on Russia and its people.

He said, "The emerging market economy is what I call predatory capitalism. It has (continued on page 4)

Eleven bicycle thefts reported at SSU

by Janet Scouten, staff writer

Salisbury State University has had 11 bicycles reported stolen so far this year, according to Director of Public Safety Jim Phillips. Three of these bikes were stolen during the week of Nov. 7 from the St. Martin Hall area.

The Salisbury City Police had six bikes reported as stolen over the night of Nov. 11.

Phillips said that he suspects that the recent thefts were related.

In spite of the recent rise in the number of bikes stolen, bike theft on campus has decreased by 67 percent from 1990 to the present.

During the 1990-91 school year, 33 bikes were reported as stolen. For the 1991-92 school year, 19 were reported and for 1992-93, 13 were reported.

Phillips attributed the decrease in bike theft to the use of "better locks."

"The price of bikes is going up and people are taking better care of them," said Phillips.

Phillips recommended using a U-shaped bike lock to secure your bicycle because "they are very hard to break into."

These locks are sold "at cost," according to Phillips, by Public Safety and at the University Center Information Desk. The locks cost $22.

Phillips also recommended recording your bicycle's serial number. Knowing this number will provide proof of ownership.

In addition to recording the serial number, Phillips said, "For parts of the bike that do not have serial numbers on them, you may want to engrave them with your drivers license number."

In this way, if the bike is recovered, any police department in the country can identify it.

However, according to Phillips, stolen bikes are seldom recovered.

Tom Rowbottom from the Salisbury Public Works Department explained that bikes whose owners cannot be identified are stored in the basement of the Public Works facility.

He said that police have jurisdiction over the contents of the store room.

When the room is filled (about once a year), the police empty it. They either sell the bikes, donate them to the Salvation Army or dispose of them, according to Rowbottom.

Center teaches suicide prevention

- giving away prized possessions
- changes in eating or sleeping patterns
- self destructive acts
- drug and/or alcohol abuse
- written indicators (poetry, journals, diaries)
- a sudden apparent peace of mind

Although it is sometimes difficult for a professional to know if any of the above are serious warnings, the Life Crisis Center feels that "it is better to err on the side of suspicion." It is also important to be aware that sudden withdrawal from friends, a loss of interest in the future and a sense of giving up are also signs that someone may be considering suicide.

If someone has given you reason to believe that they may commit suicide, it is important to answer their calls of distress. The Life Crisis Center gives four important - steps to follow in this situation.

1. Believe It- Take the person seriously, express concern and directly ask if

- send them deeper into despair.
3. Get Help- Do not let yourself be drawn into a promise of secrecy. Let other he/she is considering ending their life.

2. Listen- Try to be a supportive, non-judgmental listener by reflecting and validating the feelings of hopelessness and helplessness the person is expressing. Do not try "guilt trips" or lectures on how wonderful their life really is. It usually does not work to try and talk them out of their feelings, in fact it may significant members of the person's life know what is happening to insure their safety. Also, let the suicidal person know that you are going to get help immediately. This help may be a hotline, physician, mental health professional, or if danger is imminent, call the police or go to the a hospital emergency room. Always believe the person and never leave them

High tech classrooms meet needs

Technology Brings Classroom Into the Future

by Jennifer Burgess, Special Correspondent, College Press Service

The changing needs of students has caused a technological revolution in the college classroom, officials in academe say.

Classes that were once filled with rows of wooden desks are making way for classrooms with computer terminals and modems. Students who used to stare at college professors during lecture now look at a television screen because the professor is teaching via satellite.

At Ball State University in Muncie, IN, 200 classrooms have been wired with fiber-optic video information systems that enable instructors to use visual information from satellites, computers and video images.

From the classroom, professors can tap into information in the school's library of films, videos and laser discs. They simply punch the information into the computer and the image is viewed on the color monitors in the room.

Ball State also produces an MBA program by television program. The interactive courses are beamed by satellite to 60 sites in Indiana and Kentucky.

generated great wealth for a few, but has left the majority of the population impoverished.

"Education and the people's experience and history of authoritarianism have taught them both to appreciate freedom and to be skeptical of political parties. The image of the political party among most of the people is that of distrust. The authoritarian party of the previous regime offered the people little political freedom."

Ziegler said that there are at least 12 political parties that are seeking to gain power in the December elections. "None of them, however, have much of a following."

One of the largest questions facing Russia is what type of federalism it should adopt.

This involves the consideration of how power is going to be shared in the new government.

The new constitution being talked about in Russia is said to emphasize human rights. It also inherits a social legacy in that it will provide more social benefit to its people than do most western constitutions.

Russia is also undergoing a large scale economic crisis with extreme inflation and unemployment uncertainty among the people. The crisis is fostering a cynicism that is unhealthy for an emerging democracy.

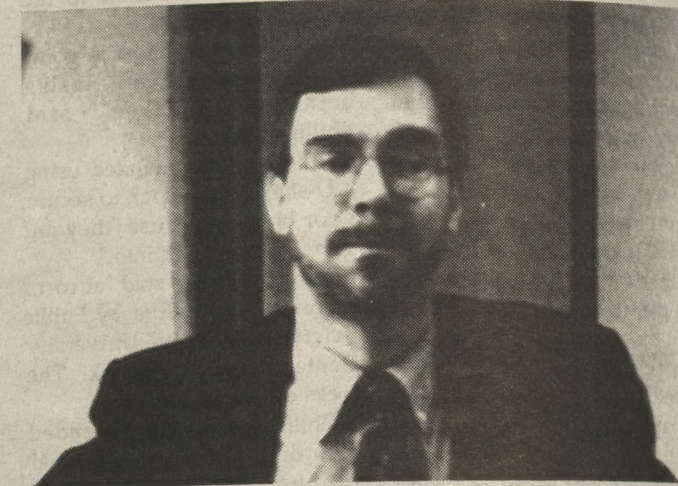

"There is evidence that Russia is developing into a civic political culture." But Ziegler said he believes it will take at least a generation to completely emerge.

Ziegler said, "It is very much in the U.S. interest to have Democracy develop in Russia. Democratic nations don't make war against each other. We could also benefit from the weapons savings."

Yeltsin wants to move toward capitalism and is sympathetic to U.S. market interests. "The dissolution of Communism is what we've been working for for so long," said Ziegler.

He also said that he supports the expansion of capitalism and American investment in Russia, but he warns that the U.S. will look bad by exploiting Russian natural resources. Ziegler said that we should not permit short term greed that is not aimed at growth because this greed would have long-term negative environmental and social effects.

In conclusion, he said that indeed there is hope for an emerging democracy in Russia but it may take a while. "It is going to require legitimacy of the population and a consensus of basic values and political trust."

Classrooms go high-tech latest computer and video equipment when watching foreign programs via satellite from around the world. Mexican news programs are beamed into the schools live.

About half of the foreign language students are still reluctant to use the new technology that has been available at Whitman since 1991.

The equipment's mobility makes it suitable for classroom computer applications and presentations, said Gary Esarey, director of Whitman's Language Learning Center.

Esarey said the technology will probably not stop in classrooms at Whitman. He said the video and satellite equipment will most likely lead to a closed-circuit cable system in the residence halls.

He said the school will probably develop a campus satellite system so the technology will reach out of the labs and into the dorm rooms.

The University of Florida in Gainesville is using its technology to reach students in other parts of Florida. The university is using its pest management class to get the bugs out of high tech learning by beaming these classes via satellite to rural areas of Florida.

Students on the receiving end of the satellite classes are gaining college credit. These fully interactive stations are hooked to the actual university classroom via satellite and modem.

"This is mainly for the non-traditional student who can't just drop everything and come to UF," Warren Croke, the university's distance education specialist, said.

According to Croke, the system is relatively cheap to run after the initial setup costs. He said the university's satellite transmitter is rented to reduce the cost of the class. The total cost per satellite class including the conference call fee is about $5 per site.

The pest management class has been offered via satellite for the past two years and there are plans to offer other satellite classes.

In order to put technology to use in the classroom, an electronic system design team has been formed to design the classroom for the school year 2000. The Department of Education is working in conjunction with the Center of Education Technology and Florida State University in Tallahassee to design the classroom of the future.

The classroom of the future has computers instead of notebooks and networks instead of textbooks, said Owen Gaede, the design team leader for the Center for Educational Technology.

Gaede said students spend valuable time memorizing the answers to questions when they should be learning the process of finding the answers.

The new technology will most likely make way for a new system of grading that would evaluate students based on their own merit and not what they can memorize, Gaede said.

Instead of the traditional grade point system, students would be evaluated by portfolio assessments. Although it is still being researched, Gaede said this system would allow students to succeed without being measured against one another.

In the classroom of the future the role of professor would also change, Gaede said. "The teacher becomes a partner in learning. The role becomes more like a coach," he said.

According to Gaede, the professor will no longer be the primary source of information. He said this change may be drastic because many college students view the college professors as the source of authority in learning.

Gaede said all colleges and universities will eventually be forced to join the technology era and change their teaching methods and that competition from commercial businesses offering worldwide network access will force colleges to change.

"Universities will either change or cease to exist," Gaede said.

Due to rising cost of education, Gaede said the team is trying to make the cost of technology cost-effective.

OPINION

On Bumper Stickers and Bashing Billy

In response to last week's article condemning "Clinton bashing" I would like to make some distinctions concerning this issue. The article basically stated that Clinton is receiving more criticism than previous presidents, and that the "sleazy items that bash the presidency only serve to perpetuate hostility and disunity," all the while asserting that since the president holds the highest elected position in the country, he should not be so ridiculed. Unfortunately it seems that Ms. Turner-Walker, who wrote the editorial, has missed the point of these so called "Clinton bashing" materials.

First of all, a public service for those who were out of touch with politics in the past decade: Political satire and "potitician bashing" has been going on for many, many years. The latest target in the political area of ridicule is President Clinton, but for those who were out of touch in the past few years and don't remember any bashing, I have two words for you... Dan Quayle. Vice-president Quayle has been dubbed by some "the most ridiculed politician of this century", and I don't know of many who missed the barage of jokes. Even in light of the latest target's opposition, he still has not been bashed to the breath or extent that Dan Quayle was. Even though Quayle drew a good deal of the political fire, President Bush was not left untaunted. "It's bad, it's bad!" is a quote that even today is found to roll off our lips... and speaking of lips, how many times was Bush ridiculed for his famous "read my lips, no new taxes," line? Dana Carvey's imitation of Bush on SNL was not meant to be a great social commenary, it was for a laugh. In a similar fashion, "Slick Willie" has become the target for comedians today.

As stated in the editorial of last week, bumper stickers which read "Impeach Clinton" usually don't mean that a public petition should be taken up to impeach the president, and in a similar way those who carry the bumper sticker "If you don't like my driving stay off the sidewalk" don't really want pedestrians to avoid using sidewalks. It's called satire. It is not supposed to be taken literally. I do not assert that impeaching a president is something to be taken lightly. The purpose of impeaching a president is to make him/her able to be prosecuted; it is not to remove a president because a few people don't care for him. (JFK?) There must be a breech of law that affects the president's ability to do his/her job.

"Impeach President Clinton... and her husband too," does not as much berate Hilary Rohdam Clinton as much as it berates Bill Clinton (who is by the way the REAL president...). Yes, Hilary has done a lot. And yes, there are some who oppose her. But the real cut is on Bill, who, as this quote implies, has been moved from the forefront to behind his wife.

I do understand that some people feel that the presidency should be immune from these attacks, but those ideas are essentially antithetical to the American Idea of freedom, extremeist in concept, and they stand to put an awful lot of people out of a job. Yes, Clinton takes some hits, but the satire directed at him is no more than at other politicians who have come before him and it is no more harmful either.

I'm Too Strong for This Town

I have but one beef with the new strength room in Magg's Gym. Of course, the new training equipment, water fountain and tons of new equipment are a tremendous improvement. And the staff is friendly and qualified. However, there is one improvement which I feel is necessary.

I am capable of bench-pressing over 750 pounds, and I can curl a Volkswagen Beetle with one arm. My problem with the weight room is that my body is too enormous to fit through the doorway. I have trained so much that I have swelled to superhuman proportions and cannot even get into the strength room to use the weights.

Thus, I feel that all doorways on campus should be expanded to accommodate my superfluous brawn. It's not fair that I can't even use the facilities for which I am paying so much money. Renovations should begin at once.

Furthermore, I will soon be bench-pressing 800 pounds. I feel that the SSU community should hold a tickertape parade in my honor, commemorating this feat.

Regards,
Toby Smith

Find your own spotter

I am writing in response to Mr. Stepsis's letter regarding strength room improvements. Though it is not my place to comment on the air conditioning or the "lack of essential equipment," I would like to address the other two issues brought up.

First of all, the reason of the prohibition of tape players is because, though some may find it hard to believe, people have different tastes in music. However, anyone is more than welcome to bring their Walks and listen to whatever they please.

Secondly, I am a weight room attendant. Though I am not very big and certainly could not bench press 300 pounds, I am not some "high school cheerleader." Although, even if I could lift that much, it is not the school's responsibility to hire spotters for everyone who wants to use the weight room. Anyone who can bench press over 600 pounds should be able of finding a friend to work

"cheerleaders."

Tune In To Campus TV

Hello there. Bet you can't guess who I am: yes, that's right, it's me, John, from On the Air with Dave and John. If you haven't heard of us--well, it's okay. I'll let you slide this time. I just thought I'd write to all my fans (all two of you).

Anyway, this is a reminder for those who live on campus. The show airs every day at two o'clock. (What does the little "o" in front of clock stand for? Sorry. Lost track.) The show is on channel twelve, so lock those dials. Don't actually lock them, it's just a figure of speech. I don't want anyone to say, "you know, I had to buy a new TV set because that John had me lock my dials and now I lost the key and I can't watch Seinfeld and I don't want my parents to find out that I was stupid enough to listen to a guy who has this stupid show on campus television."

I don't want to sound desperate, but hey, you may have a chance to win a dream date with me, and it will be televised.

Debt of Knowledge

by Yoav Wachsmann, editorial columnist

Somewhere in central Manhattan there is a huge digital board with an ever-changing thirteen digit number. This board is not located in Wall Street, and the incomprehensible number is hardly a measure of stock or wealth. In fact it is an emblem of economic woes and trouble.

In the heart of the most powerful metropolis in the world lies a symbol of economic infirmity. While the rich roll their money at the local stock exchange, an economic clemency spreads devouring the wealth of our nations. Every night when we go to sleep this economic illness spreads onward destroying our fragile infrastructure.

Sometimes we wonder if our national debt will drive us to the brink of collapse. After all, none of us - not even the most astute economist - can begin to imagine the true proportions of our national debt. $4.4 trillion dollars is hardly pocket money, even to industrial giants and Wall Street kings.

It seems as if our entire economy is sliding on thin ice, and our national debt is like a knife borrowing into it. Surprisingly, despite predictions by debt hawks that our economy will deteriorate into shambles unless we cut the debt substantially, the US's economy is doing well.

In the past three quarters, the number of jobs in the market rose considerably, consumer confidence slowly climbed up and the US had regained control of several product markets such as software.

Is it possible then that the unimaginable sum that we define as our debt is not prophetic of an economic doom? Could it be that the American voters had been fooled by so-called debt hawks? The uninformed popular campaign promises to create a budget surplus, thus cutting the eminent debt.

Our national debt is the sum of all the annual deficits that had accumulated since the

(To make a correction, when I say it's my show, it's actually Dave's show. Dave is known more wildly here on campus because he's been here for about ten years and I've only attended SSU for about six.) Dave [Kilkeary] is the host, a good looking one, at least that's what all the ladies say. I have a question for those ladies. Why do you tell me that Dave is good looking?

Back to the point, our show is a comedy with real live guests, none of those pseudo ones. We have talent, not us, but anyone who would like to be on television, and we also have rock videos. The show also has Dave and myself doing zany things such as running over cats. (Not really. Television magic makes it all possible.)

So, if you're not doing anything at 2:00, tune in to On the Air with Dave and John.

Football Team Unfairly Crucified by Newspaper

In the Nov. 2 edition of The Flyer, the sports editor Chris Kirk has committed a flagrant injustice to one of the university's athletic teams.

In his article entitled "Football team falls short in defensive battle" he crucifies any glimmer of morale that our football may have had. Please if you would explain to me and the rest of the SSU student body how someone like Mr. Kirk can place blame on one individual, Vince Craig for a game that the TEAM lost? If Mr. Kirk had been to the same football game I attended, he would have realized that, in the pouring rain, it is anyone's ball game and turnovers are going to occur more frequently than usual. Honestly, who really cares that the two teams combine for 12 fumbles; personally not me.

In Mr. Kirk's article he also states that the defense was not to blame in the loss, don't get me wrong, I am certainly not faulting the defense in any way shape or form, they turned in an outstanding performance, but honestly, how can you fault the offense. While the comments Mr. Kirk stated may have been the facts, they were given in a negative connotation. He did do his job of reporting what happened during the Albany

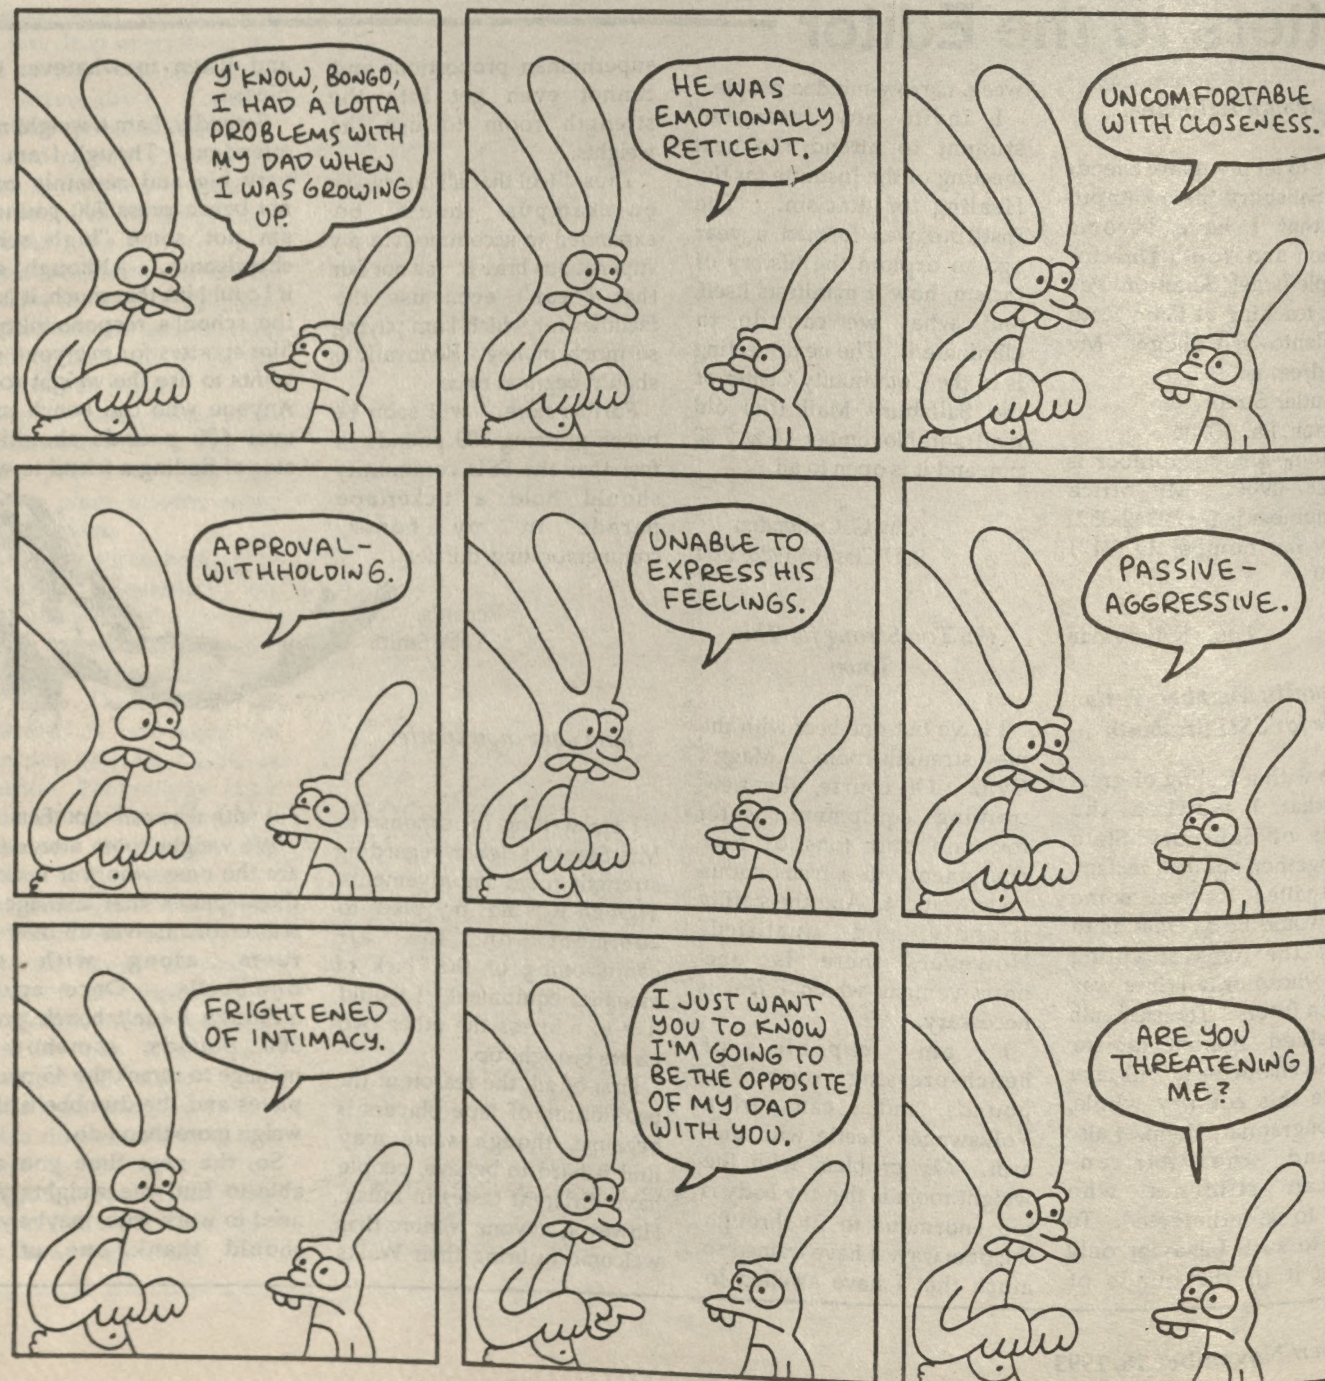

State game, but did not include that Len collected 141 yards...122 more yards in the air than Albany's quarterback. Why did he have to focus on the fact that in the second half where no scoring took place at all, and that Len was 1-6 and intercepted. Yes they are the facts, however, they cloud anyone's thinking on how effective Len Annetta really is.

Instead, why not focus on last year, when SSU gave up 473 yards rushing as they lost to Albany State 48-7. Considering this, SSU needs to be praised for holding Albany State to only 7 points instead of being criticized.

Of all the things to say about what stuck out in the game, it surely would not have been the size of mud puddle by the end of the football game.

early seventies. Every four years the president hands over a budget plan to Congress who in turn, lobbies to amend it and votes on it afterwards.

Though every presidency had assured the American public that it would create a budget surplus, none since Eisenhower had succeeded in doing so. In fact, in the past years, Congress had been compelled to borrow money from outside sources in order to pay for unplanned expenditures. This borrowing, through the sell of federal bonds and bills, produced the deficit.

Approximately 14% of our government revenues are appropriate to pay interest on the national debt. Although this interest handicaps our government to a degree, the money doesn't simply slip into the ground. Only 11% of our national debt is owned by foreigners to whom we pay interest. The rest of the interest is played to American banks, industries and individual bond holders, recipients reinvesting most of the money back into the economy either through consumption or investment in the business sector. Therefore, the notion that the money is devoured into the ground is as erroneous as could be.

The most surprising aspect about our national debt is that the government owns the largest part of its debt.

Dear Friends,

It is time once again to round up all those stray pennies and corral them in an Easter Seal "Million Pennies" jug.

Did you know that one gallon of pennies is enough for one session of speech therapy? Three gallons will cover the cost of one physical therapy session and help towards the purchase of new therapy tables. And five gallons will help send a child with a disability to summer camp.

Check the floor of your car, look under the cushions of your sofa, empty your sock drawer, pockets and piggy banks and join the Penny Round-up. Herd those pennies into a "Million Pennies" jug and call one of the numbers below.

Agencies within the government, such as social security, buy into the government augmenting the size of the debt.

The question still remains - why was the debt created in the first place? Though extremely controversial, many economist and politicians see nothing wrong with borrowing money in order to reinvest it in our infrastructure. This type of borrowing can actually be very beneficial if the rate of return (the profit made from the investment) in the form of social benefit or an industrial buildup is higher than the interest paid on the interest to the bond holders.

When looking at the size of the debt one must also consider the size of the country's economic power in comparison to the country itself. After all, Monaco or any other country but the US would deteriorate into a helter skelter if it incurred such a debt. The debt, despite its enormity, is considerably smaller than our Gross National Product. The GNP is the value of all the products and the services produced in a country annually.

Currently, our GNP is slightly over six trillion dollars compared to our debt which is $4.4. Although our national debt as a percentage of our GNP is somewhat unhealthy, as long as we can assure that our GNP grows faster than our debt, we have little to fear. Therefore, our government should worry about developing our economy first and then about cutting our debt's size. Our government shouldn't be inhibited by debt hawks that restrain it from voting on the best possible budget.

Of course the American public wasn't frightened by ghosts. The debt does handicap the government to a degree. Moreover, it funnels money from the working class, from poorer states and from smaller banks into rich bond holders, bigger banks, and the richer states. Thus the debt weakens the lower classes and strengthens the rich. The debt problem is a real one but shouldn't be blown out of proportion.

Mamas and Papas give concert at SSU

by Erica Franco, staff writer

The Mamas and the Papas, the singing group that originated in 1966, is still entertaining devoted fans around the world.

They have performed in Germany nine times this year, in the Far East, all over Europe members Scott McKenzie, Lisa Islan, and Deb Lyons. The women are the newest band members and have been with the group for one month. The new musicians are from New York City and Brooklyn, N.Y.

Scott McKenzie, a long time friend of the original Mamas

"Even though only one of the members was from the original band, I thought they sounded very much the same. The Mamas and the Papas put on a wonderful performance and I'm glad I went."

and in South America. They have performed as far away as Iceland and now as close as Holloway Hall.

The band performed at Salisbury State University on Nov. 8 in Holloway Hall Auditorium from 8 to 9:30 pm. The concert was a part of the Fall Lecture Series titled "Flashbacks: A Retrospective of the 60's."

The group played "oldies" such as "This is Dedicated to the One I Love," "California Dreamin'," "Dancin' in the Streets," and their new hit "It's Just a Few More Years Til the Year 2000." They dedicated the Hippy Anthem, "San Francisco" to Vietnam veterans.

The Mamas and Papas consist of original member Denny Doherty, and new and Papas, debuted with John Phillips' song "San Francisco" in 1967.

Doherty, along with original group members John Phillips, Cass Elliot and Michelle Gilliam recorded hit songs in the 60's.

Elaine "Spanky" McFarlane was a member for 10 years and just recently retired. McFarlane formed a group, Spanky and Our Gang, which produced hit songs from 1967-68, a year after the Mamas and Papas initial success. McFarlane was a close friend to the late Mama Cass and performed with the Mamas and Papas. She retired from the new Mamas and Papas about two years ago.

"Spanky needed a well deserved rest after 10 years of performing. She went to L.A.

The Mamas and Papas performed at SSU's Holloway Hall on Nov. 8.

and may come back to the group. It's like one big family. Whoever wants to sing at a performance may, whenever they want," said Doherty.

SSU student Jill Epstein went to the show. She said, "I had a lot of fun at the show. The performers were all very lively and enthusiastic. Even though only one of the members was from the original band, I thought they sounded very much the same. The Mamas and the Papas put on a wonderful performance and I'm glad I went."

Some students chose not to go to the show because the originals were not performing. SSU junior, Jessica McCann said, "I didn't go because there was only one real band member."

A new album, yet to be titled, will be released in a few months. Songs written and recorded over the past 10 years and songs John Phillips wrote as publishing demos will be on the album.

Tickets were $10 for general admission and $5 for SSU staff and faculty. SSU students, with an I.D. were eligible for two free tickets each.

The Legendary Wid to entertain at SSU

by Joseph D. Orr, staff writer

The Legendary Wid will be coming to Salisbury State University Nov. 20, 1993 to put on a comedy act like no other.

The show, which will start at 8:00 pm in the Wicomico Room of the GUC, will star Wid, a punster whose act features nonstop one-liners and endless visual gags.

How did Wid get his unusual stage name? From hitch hiking across the country. A state trooper once stopped him for hitching and when he couldn't produce any identification, the officer wrote in his report "Without I.D.", or W.I.D.

Wid was a journeyman for years, until he settled down as owner of an antiques shop in New Jersey.

It was here that he began accumulating his vast collection of junk.

Wid soon began performing comedy routines for customers who ventured into his shop. It was finally suggested that he give it a whirl at a nearby comedy club.

The Legendary Wid now headlines at comedy clubs, colleges and casinos. His props have mushroomed into a truckload of sight gags and puns. Thanks to the SSPB, that truck will be making a stop in Salisbury.

Wid has appeared on Fox network's "Comic Strip Live" as well as the "ABC Comedy Club Special," the "Showtime Comedy Club Network" and MTV.

Wid, a firm believer in the conservation and recycling movements, has exhibited his "junk art" at schools, shows and galleries.

"If every comedian used this much stuff in their act," jokes Wid, "there would be a heck of a lot more room in landfills for the real garbage."

The show promises to be a good one. "This guy [Wid] is supposed to be really, really funny," said SSPB comedy/concerts chairperson Mark Cyphers.

Admission to Saturday night's program will be free.

The Super-doooper Legendary Wid is coming to SSU to make us laugh until we pee in our pants.

Krack Me Up game show earns laughs at SSU

by Lisa Strotz, staff writer

Krack Me Up: the Comedy Game Show was sponsored by the Salisbury State Program Board on Fri 5, in Wicomico Room of the University Center. The show highlighted rising comedians such as Brian McCreat and John Heffron. McCreat made his name on the comedy circuit performing opening routines for Sinbad and Martin Lawrence while Heffron has made appearances on MTV's Half Hour Comedy Hour and currently is working as a consultant for MTV's The Real World. Pat Francis, a comedian from Chicago, was the show's MC.

Salisbury State student publishes first book

by Chip Guy, staff writer

Salisbury State has yet another published author. But, unlike many others in the past, this author happens to be a student. Sharon Miner, a freshman majoring in English, recently had her first book published, The Delmarva Conspiracy. As the title suggests, this fictional adventure takes place in the rural setting of the Delmarva Peninsula. The book is aimed at young adults. The story unfolds as the main character, Matthew Broderick, is experiencing a recurring nightmare. At the same time, unbeknownst to Matt and his family, a secret Neo-Nazi organizer who happens to be an agent for the F.B.I. is plotting to use Delmarva as a testing ground to "rekindle the flames of Hitler's failed Nazi movement."

"official acts" becoming so routine in their community. The constant rounding up of citizens, segregation of ethnic and minority groups and peculiar happenings alert the Brodericks into searching beyond the thinly cloaked attempt to bring a society to its knees. The race against time then begins as Broderick and his members. Losing control he just hung his head saying, "Feel free to yell out any incoherent crap you want!" Francis, as well as McCreat and Heffron displayed great comfort on stage talking one on one with audience members. The show was fast paced, energetic and the individual stand up routines were hysterical. It was fast paced and energetic. It was during the game show segment that the show was received less enthusiastically. Freshman Michelle Solomon commented, "It was really funny, but the game show seemed to drag on."

One audience member was selected when their name was drawn from a hat and asked to sit on stage for three minutes. During those three minutes each of the comedians took turns trying to make the contestant laugh. Only one rule applied to both parties: no touching. If the contestant managed to keep a "dead pan" face they recieved the $25, if they so much as let their lip quiver, they won a tee shirt instead. The comedians' primary laugh tactic entailed wearing bizarre costumes and acting out different roles. The funniest costumes, although unsuccessful, (the players won the $25) were Harvey the Disco Man and Dr. Qwong. Harvey was a typical disco nightmare in his dance ensemble complete with the wide collar shirt and jacket. Dr. Qwong, on the other hand was especially funny as two comedians worked as a team, one man behind the stage speaking and a second man on stage mimicing the words and dramatically failing his arms, in a replication of a poorly dubbed Sat. afternoon karate movie. Although the costumes were good, the routines started look very similar. In addition contestants had discovered that if they chewed gum it was easy to keep the required dead pan face. With this combination, an hour was too lengthy for the game show segment.

family run up and down the Delmarva Peninsula trying to defeat the evil scheme. The adventure leads readers to the Dover Air Force Base, throughout the back roads of Delaware and Maryland, out to Ocean City and into Salisbury. There is an obvious struggle in this adventure between the forces of evil and good, but there is also the struggle between man and himself. Matt must overcome his fears in order to help restore peace and tranquility to the Delmarva community, but above all, to save the world. It is a story of relevant issues for the times, such as racism, and the courage people must find to defeat such societal dilemmas. Miner's idea for the story came after she herself experienced a recurring nightmare, the same one Broderick experiences in the story. The nightmare became Miner's inspiration and driving force in creating the children's book. "I was taking a writing course at the time and used this description as an idea for the story," Miner said. "My instructor liked the idea so much that she suggested I submit a manuscript to publishers." Miner said she has always displayed an interest in children. She said her hope in doing this book was to "explain the history and tragedy of the Holocaust in a manner easily understood by children." Miner feels the story can be enjoyed by all ages because of the thrill and suspense it contains, even though it is aimed at younger audiences. Miner is originally from Norwalk, Conn. She moved to Salisbury in 1979 with her husband and family. They currently own and operate Unicorn Stables, and Miner is the founding figure and president of the University's equestrian club. Although it took Miner almost two years to complete the project, she said "it was time worth investing." She began writing in 1988 and plans to write a second book within another year, this one also designed for younger audiences. A book signing will be held December 5 at B. Dalton Booksellers in the Centre at Salisbury. The Delmarva Conspiracy is currently on shelves locally, at The Book Rack and B. Dalton.

SPORTS Football

team ends season on the right note

Josh LeBaron, Sports Writer

It was a day for records at Sea Gull Stadium as the Salisbury State University (2-7) football team beat Guilford (2-8), 41-3.

For many of the SSU seniors this would be the last organized football game that they would play in and it was apparent that each and everyone of them wanted to go out in style with a victory.

It looked like it was going to be a promising day after the Seagulls scored on their first play from scrimmage.

Quarterback Len Annetta connected with Derrick Arnold who had four receptions for 83 yards, for a 36 yard touchdown to start off the scoring. Vince Craig added the extra point making the score 7-0 just :20 into the game.

Annetta, who was 28-42 with one interception and a school record 437 yards also became SSU's all-time leading passer with 5390 yards when he connected with Charlie Whalen in the first quarter.

Whalen who has set a few records himself, had seven receptions for 78 yards and one touchdown. Wide Receiver Fred Grant also had a big day with seven receptions for 159 yards.

The offense was impressive putting together numerous drives. They marched down the field with confidence as if no team could stop their running and air raid today.

The seagull defense played excellent holding Guilford to 89 yards in the air. Freshmen defensive back Eric Hill led the pack with three interceptions. Scott Lancaster and Henry Fehlman also had interceptions. Tim Jones and Kevin Bradford each had a sack.

On the ground, running back Mike Cannady led SSU with 15 rushes for 55 yards. Byron Pugh contributed 13 rushes for 46 yards and one touchdown.

For Guilford, running back Jeff Hatch played well rushing for 143 yards on 24 carries breaking the 1,000 yard mark for the season in the process.

Guilford's only points of the day came on a 25 yard field goal by Steve Bryant at the 13:12 mark in the second quarter.

half this game was looking like a blowout.

In the second half the touchdowns kept coming. Randall Owens, Stan Griffin and Shawn Cahall all caught touchdown receptions from Annetta in the half making the score 41-3 at the end of the game.

There were a number of penalties in the game. SSU was penalized ten times for 98 yards while Guilford was (continued on page 16)

Men's basketball team readies for season

Mike Beardslee, Sports Writer

It's that time of year again, sports fans. Strap yourself to your chair and hold on tight, because basketball season is finally here.

SSU men's basketball team plays its opening game in the Susquehanna Tournament in Sellingsgrove, Pennsylvania against Jersey City State on Saturday, November 19.

This year promises to be an interesting one for the Gulls. The team is one of the youngest that Ward Lambert, the men's basketball coach for the past 24 years, has ever coached. There are only three seniors on the 15 man squad, and there are only six veterans returning to the line-up.

Lambert says that it is the lack of experience that worries him the most. "You just don't know how well they'll perform in crunch time."

On the other hand, Lambert says that this may be one of the deepest teams he's ever coached, and that they have a great deal of overall talent. "I can go three deep at just about every position without any trouble." This may be the key to success this season. "With our depth, we can speed up the tempo of the run and gun, and wear our opponents down."

Lambert installed the run and gun system four years ago, and has posted a winning record every season since.

Last year SSU averaged 98.1 points per game, more than any other Division III school in the country. In fact, for two out of the last four years, Salisbury has led the nation in scoring. This year, Lambert hopes to score well over 100 points a game. There are nine new additions to the squad that might make this possible.

First, there's sophomore guard Charles Harvey, a 6'1" transfer from the University of Maryland, Baltimore County. A good outside shooter and ball-handler, Harvey is also capable of taking it to the hole.

Then there's John DeRichie, a 6'2" freshman guard from Somers Point, New Jersey. A good defender with very long arms, DeRichie is also an excellent three point shooter with a very quick release.

Delano Brown, a 5'9" sophomore transfer from UMBC, is a good outside shooter and ball-handler. He is expected to see some time at point guard.

Casey Musick, a 5'11" sophomore transfer from St. Joe's, PA, is an excellent outside shooter, and one of the best defenders on the team. He is expected to start at shooting guard.

Junior transfer Jamie Harich, a 6'4" forward from Montgomery College, Germantown, is a good rebounder and three point shooter with a decent all-around game.

Forward Craig Blackmon is a 6'3" sophomore transfer from North Carolina A&T. A good offensive rebounder and outside shooter, Blackmon runs the floor extremely well, and may be the best fast-break finisher on the team.

Randy Clark is a 6'3" freshman forward out of Poolesville, MD. He is capable of playing several different positions, and his long arms allow him to rebound well, especially offensively.

Center Greg Potter is a 6'4" junior transfer, also from MC-G. He's a good hustler and rebounder, and is very team-oriented.

Josh Mitchell is a 6'6" freshman from Loch Raven High School. A good post player, Mitchell is quick for a big man, and runs the floor surprisingly well. He is expected to start at center.

Junior Kyle Jefferson is expected to start at forward this year after playing a backup role as a freshman and sophomore.

6'0" senior Jon Evans will start the season at point guard. Originally he was slated to back up Tom Wolfe, but Wolfe injured his knee in a scrimmage against Chesapeake Community College. He has undergone arthroscopic surgery and is expected to return to the line-up by the time the Gull Classic rolls around in early December.

Finally, there is 6'3" forward Dameron Ross. Ross' contributions last year as a junior were numerous. He led the team in scoring, averaging nearly 30 points a game. In fact, his average was second in the nation for Division III. This year he will be expected to put up similar numbers. One of Dameron's greatest assets is his three-point shooting ability. "He's a streak shooter, and often he'll go on seven or eight point runs. That gets the team fired up," said Lambert.

And they'll need to be fired up this year if they expect to have a good record. This may not be the toughest schedule that SSU has ever played, but 13 of the 22 games are away. In fact, SSU won't face an opponent in Maggs until December 1, when they play Christopher Newport.

By then a lot of questions will be answered, the biggest of which is the inexperience factor. "If we come out of the Susquehanna tournament with a few wins, then we'll be in good shape," said Lambert.

In any case, "We'll be an exciting team to watch."

For a preseason glimpse of the 93-94 men's basketball team, check out the maroon and gold scrimmage at 7:30pm Tuesday, November 16 in Maggs Gym.

Whalen concludes spectacular four year stint

Mike Beardslee, Sports Writer

Senior wide receiver Charlie Whalen has had four productive years as a member of the Salisbury State football team. The last two years in particular have been good ones, as Charlie has led the team in receptions, and has often been the go-to guy in tight situations.

Whalen comes from Marple Newtown High School in Newtown Square, Pennsylvania, where he played running back. He also played running back here until near the end of his freshman year, when he began to see time at the wide receiver spot.

Whalen says that as a sophomore he had a negative attitude towards his own performance. "I kept thinking that I would drop every pass instead of catching them." To solve his problem, he went to see Dr. Bob MacBrien at the Center for Personal and Professional Development. MacBrien taught him to use positive imagery to improve his game. "It really helped me my junior year."

That was the year Whalen broke SSU's single season reception mark of 59 catches in 14 games. Whalen caught 63 passes in 9 games to set the new record. He was also among the top 10 in the nation for receiving and kick-returns in Division III.

In addition to this, he broke the SSU record for most catches in a game twice. The first time was against Rowan, when he caught 11 balls. Later in the season against Albany State, he pulled in 12 receptions, breaking his own record.

As a senior, Whalen shattered the old career reception mark of 97 in the Frostburg game early this season. He goes into the final game of his career with 129 catches.

Whalen says that it has been frustrating at times for him and for the team. "I'd trade those records for more wins, because when we win, everyone is successful."

Whalen says that he feels the team is a lot different from the way it was his freshman year. "The attitude is much better. We want to win... it's just a matter of getting things to click."

"We feel like we can score against any team."

Whalen says that he would like to go out on a winning note against Guilford, and not just for personal reasons. "We want to win because it's the last game, and because it's homecoming. But we also want to leave the veterans with some good memories, and give the returning players something to look forward to."

Whalen, an accounting major, says he will try to find work in the accounting department of a corporation, and says he plans to eventually take the CPA exam.

Woerhle ends four year career

ScottWoerhle

Josh LeBaron, Sports Writer

For Senior Scott Woerhle, time attending Salisbury State University has been time well spent.

Woerhle, an inside linebacker for the Seagull's football team has been at this university since 1989. He has been a part of the football team since his sophomore year here at SSU.

Being a veteran player on the team Woerhle has seen some changes over the years. He said, "I have seen the attitudes of the players change. There are more positive attitudes on the team now. Everything seems to be more positive."

For Woerhle, playing football has been a positive experience. He took a light course load this semester so he continue playing football.

Woerhle said, "I am definitely going to miss the comrotry of being on the team and just hanging with the guys."

Woerhle's most memorable moment of his career as a football player was last years win over Guilford in the last game of the season. "We were down 10-7 at halftime and we ended up coming back and winning 14-10. Our whole team came together and played very well."

As for Saturday being the last organized football game that he will likely play in, Woerhle said, "It is definitely a weird feeling. It is hard to imagine that I won't be playing again. It's been fun though. I have a lot of memories. It really has been a great four years. I don't have a single regret."

For this respiratory therapy major, graduation will be in December. His plans for after graduation include heading back to New Jersey to look for a job.

Scott Woerhle's skills at inside linebacker as a part of the football team, and as a student will be missed next season by the SSU Seagulls.

Football team romps 41-3 penalized nine times for 104 yards.

All in all, the seagulls looked great. With their 523 total yards offense and a stinging defense it was easy to tell that the players were well prepared for this win. To close out their season with a big win like this one is a positive stepping stone for the players to come out next year and win some more games in this fashion.

Come out and catch a Sneak peek at the 1993-1994 men's basketball team at the maroon and gold scrimmage on Nov. 16.

EDITOR'S NOTE: All Salisbury State University senior football players will be featured in the next issue of the Flyer; due to time and space limitations it was impossible to include all of them at this time. The Flyer regrets any inconvenience. M.Y.

"I am'z what I am'z, cuz I can'tz stanz no more." -Popeye.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon hopes that the weekend was great. Our fall banquet was a huge success. We would like to thank all the beautiful ladies who attended. Many alumni were in town and the tailgate party was an experience, to say the least. Congratulations to all those who had a hand in making it happen.

Well let's take a look into my crystal ball and see what's going on in the world of Sigma Alpha Epsilon. We've got Darren educating a great pledge class, keep it up guys. Skeeter's keeping our throats wet and painting on the side. Z is in the training room 24-7, no one's being picked on. J.J.'s mixing at The Flying Club. Pig pen's just being himself and no one has seen Chip in years.

In the sporting news, the SAE indoor soccer team has jumped to an impressive 2-0 start, winning their first game 9-1 and winning by forfeit in their second. Could we be talking dream team here guys? Strong play by Alan Gruger, Mike Pearl and Randy Friedhoffer. They have netted in several goals, while our girls, Shannon and Kristi have been hitting the two pointers. Anchoring a sound defense is Kevin Evans through his fabulous goal attending.

Well SSU its been fun so far, let's keep it that way!

Tau Kappa Epsilon

Its been a few weeks, but now the column that you've been looking for is back. We've got all the news that makes this consistently the most intriguing page in The Flyer.

We'll start out this week with an apology and announcement. This writer wants to apologize to Jim "Lucky" Mooney for omitting his name a few weeks back when I wrote about the L.E.A.D.S. counselors. Jim also has taken a little buddy and they have loads of fun together.

For all of you who attended the fourth Halloween bash, you know it was a great time despite the soggy wood. Number five will be even better, believe that. Thanx to Thumper, Bonzai and all the others who set up an excellent bash.

If any clubs, organizations, groups, cartels, branches or whatever want to party down with the campus crazies call up South D. ~+ 543-1492 and set it up. That's all for this week. Thoughts to ponder: We are not banned, censored or acquitted any longer, and I'll try to quote from a song correctly (no names mentioned) "Ain't goin out like that." Till next week - Stay Hard - TKE (Ignorance is NOT a gift).

Happy Birthday to us! AST is celebrating 15 years on Salisbury State University's campus! On Nov. 18, we will have been established for a strong 15 years! We look forward to many more wonderful times. On Nov. 4, we celebrated our Annual Founder's Day! In 1899, eight women created our organization and we are still going strong. To honor the time, we had our Founder's Day Formal at the Fenwick Inn on Nov. 6! We had a blast with our sisters, alumnae and pledges. Our sisterhood is worth every minute!

Congratulations to the winner of the AST raffle - two movie passes and dinner for two at Ruby Tuesdays! Tell your parents to be on the lookout for your final exam care packages from AST! We hope everyone had a good time at "Going Bananas"! Thanks to Greek Council and Student Activities for the night of fun!

It was great to see all of the alumnae that returned for Homecoming! You're always welcome!

Keep your peepers open for those three letters that say it best - AST! C-ya!

We would also like to thank the brothers of Sig Tau for the surprise they gave us at the party. Congratulations to Lori Ferguson for her nomination to the homecoming court. The sisters of ZTA are excited and ready to participate in "Going Bananas". We would like to thank our traveling leadership consultant Allyson Meade for her valuable time spent with us. We hope your stay was enjoyable. We will be participating in a bake sale coming up. The ladies of ZTA would like to thank the ladies of AST and Phi Mu for their participation in the sorority get together. Keep up the awesome work pledges, we are very proud of you. The sisters of ZTA are looking forward to many holiday activities. Any organization interested in having a social with the ladies of ZTA please get in contact with our social chairperson, Danielle Hunter at 546-5093. We wish everyone a great homecoming and hope everyone has an awesome time, not to mention unforgettable.

Pi Lambda Phi

First off congratulations to the Omicron Pledge class for making it over the "Hump". Now let's get down to something important. Last weekend was Homecoming and our Alumni showed up in droves. The festivities were kicked off at Einstein's and ended at Frank's Place with a brunch. Alumni- nice try in softball but maybe you'll win next year. Thanks to our alumni for coming down and providing us with stories for years to come.

Last week we held our annual blood drive and would like to thank all of the participants for coming out and donating an hour of their time.

Last but not least thanks to the ladies of Phi Mu for a great social. It was great to have you back Scott Ruppe... Glen try not to break any tables this week.

1. The mortarboard (academic hat) is to be worn with the front point over the forehead below the front hairline, and so the flat board is parallel to the floor. (Not worn on the back of the head with the board pointing upward.) NO DECORATION OF ANY KIND IS TO BE PLACED ON THE MORTARBOARD.

2. Honors students will have gold and white hood. It is to be worn with the gold side out and the white inner lining turned out at the top, over the gold (like a collar). Gold cords would be worn under the honors hood.

3. Candidates for the bachelor's degree should come into the auditorium with the tassel on the right, hanging near the right eye. After the degrees are conferred, the tassel is shifted to the left side. The signal for shifting the tassel will be given by the President (and/or your faculty marshal).

4. Candidates for the master's degree should place the tassel at the left front of the mortarboard prior to entering the auditorium and should not lift it.

5. Master's degree candidates will wear the robe, but will carry the hood over the left arm until they reach the stage, where it will be placed on the candidate who should face the audience and bend down a little. Faculty marshals will give you more specific information.

6. Graduates will receive graduation picture information from Chappell Studio, Inc. This information will arrive at your permanent address in the near future.

7. Candidates should not chew gum or tobacco.

19. Graduation Decorum

Graduation ceremonies are, by their very nature, festive occasions. The festivity manifests itself in many ways including the dress of the students and faculty adorned in academic regalia and the warmth, joy and satisfaction of accomplishment. The ceremonies are also marked by seriousness where the actual conferring of degrees signifies long hard work on the part of everyone involved: students, faculty, administrators, parents and spouses. As a consequence of the serious nature of the ceremony, students are expected to maintain a measure of decorum consonant with the occasion.
